

Evans Campus (1984)

Owned

1400 Evans Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94124
77,325 ASF
90,000 GSF

- Apprenticeship
- Automotive Mechanics
- English
- Internet
- Math
- Trade Skills
- Office of Vocational Education
- Community Service Offices

The Evans Campus, the newest of the City College of San Francisco's campuses, opened in 1994. The original goal of the campus was to consolidate City College of San Francisco's Skilled Trades and Automotive Programs at one site.

Evans is the center for other training programs, including a DHS-funded (Department of Human Services) Center for Construction and Maritime Training, and is the preeminent West Coast teaching factory for the apparel and garment trades and industry. Evans has approximately 2,000 students.

The college has purchased the Evans Campus and is renovating and remodeling the facility so that it can be the focus of an expanded mix of vocational and technical programs. The intent would be to complement the offerings at the Southeast Campus.

The Evans Campus plans to expand the Construction and Maritime Trades Training Center and develop a transportation hub, including automotive, aeronautics, railroad, maritime, and intelligent transportation system.