Faculty and Administration of City College

The faculty and administration at City College of San Francisco consists of more than 1,500 men and women chosen for their training and competence. Because City College is a community college, offering instruction to meet the educational needs of both its students and the community, its teaching staff is necessarily diverse. It includes, for example, philosophers and nurses, historians and executive chefs, artists and criminologists, linguists and chemists, engineers and ornamental horticulturists, geologists and broadcasters, mechanics and biological scientists, welders and computer programmers, political scientists and printers, dentists and accountants, carpenters and physicists, tailors and journalists, specialists in literature and radiologic technicians.

Diverse Backgrounds

They bring to their students extensive backgrounds gained through years of study and research in the United States and in foreign countries; and through extensive experience in business, industry, education, travel, the Armed Forces, and government service. Many are prominent in the life of the community. Others are officers and policy makers in professional organizations. A number are authors of nationally and internationally used texts in their fields. And a surprisingly large number have done pioneer work in developing special courses and curricula.

Interest in Students

This diversity in the backgrounds and professional interests of faculty members has made a considerable contribution to the College and the community. The outstanding characteristic of the faculty, however, is neither its diversity nor its acknowledged competence, but rather a common interest in students—through teaching and its closely related activity, guidance. For these are the principal functions of the College, as they have been from its founding more than six decades ago.

The College offers many advantages, but it can offer none more important than the interest of instructors and counselors in those whom they teach and advise. Without it, the most impressive and lavishly endowed college is educationally valueless. It is the quality from which students at the College benefit most.

It is the quality most emphasized throughout the College; for instructors spend the major portion of their time working directly with students—in classrooms, in laboratories and offices, on the campus, and in the field—so that the men and women entrusted to their care may acquire knowledge, skills, and understanding that will enable them, in the years ahead, to lead lives that are both useful and rich.
