Abstract:

The National Articulation and Transfer Network (NATN) represents a coalition of more than 100 urban-based high schools and community colleges, and select culturally enriched four-year colleges and universities dedicated to serving at-risk populations. NATN works in designated groups to design, develop and field test five critical components of the overall program. They include: (1) general Articulation agreements; (2) a Transfer Guidance Manual and database; (3) web-based software applications and technological infrastructure; (4) on-line interactive applications for students and staff; and (5) a longitudinal research database. NATN aims to increase both the achievement and the aspirations of our country’s minority students, increasing their graduation rates and reversing established trends.
