Asian American Studies, Students Making a Change (SMAC) and the Multicultural Infusion Project (MIP) are very proud to present:

Who We BE:
The colorization of America

with Jeff Chang, Director of the Institute for Diversity in the Arts at Stanford University

Wednesday, March 20th
12:00-1:30 pm
Lower Level Student Union, Ocean Campus

Jeff Chang is the Director of the Institute for Diversity in the Arts at Stanford University. A radical historian with both street cred and academic chops, Chang talks about multiculturalism, race relations, student activism, political engagement, the state of the arts, and the politics of abandonment.

His previous books include Can’t Stop Won’t Stop, winner of the American Book Award, and Total Chaos: The Art and Aesthetics of Hip Hop. He was a founding editor of Colorlines magazine and named by Utne Reader as “One of the 50 Visionaries Who Are Changing Your World.”

“Culture moves before politics,” says Jeff Chang. In the seminal Can’t Stop Won’t Stop, Chang used hip-hop culture to radically remix the last 25 years of America’s political and social history. In his pulsating follow-up, Who We Be, he traces the rise of multiculturalism—its roots, its triumphs, its commercialization—to tell a new, vibrant, and utterly necessary people’s history.

With questions and to RSVP for groups, please contact Tracy Burt, tburt@ccsf.edu, 452-7171.
Any person(s) requiring accommodations please contact DSPS at 415-452-5481.
Please give at least 72 hours notice.