Keyboarding

“The reasons typing skills and learning typing are important are clear. Typing skills allow us to better cope with a technological world based on text communication. They open up new opportunities for careers and income-earning potential, and they provide important opportunities for socialization and interaction with others.”

Computer Literacy

“The highest goal of a computer-literate person is to be able to learn and use new computer applications without large amounts of help. Computer literacy gives people an edge in both their careers and education. Using the mouse, managing various windows, alternating between the use of keyboard and mouse, minimizing windows, opening and closing files, etc can be daunting tasks to one who has never used a computer before.”

World Wide Web

“Traditional information research tools and sources found in library media centers have been supplemented by the information available on the Internet. In some cases, students at almost all instructional levels from elementary schools to universities are doing all of the information access portion of their research projects and papers on the Internet. The Internet in general, and the World Wide Web in specifically, offer easy access to almost unlimited information. A growing number of students have access to this incredible resource from their homes while others use it in school libraries and classrooms.”
