CCSF Chancellor Responds to ACCJC Letter to Leader Pelosi

City College released the following statement today from Chancellor Art Tyler:

“The ACCJC’s response to Leader Pelosi is disheartening. CCSF has made tremendous strides in improving its finances, administration, and accountability consistent with the ACCJC’s own recommendations. CCSF has earned the right to have more time to finish the job, and the U.S. Department of Education has told the ACCJC it can grant such time. The ACCJC has not been on campus for 14 months and we would welcome the opportunity to show them the tremendous progress we’ve made.

I am also disappointed that the ACCJC is making such strong public statements even as it considers an appeal from CCSF.

The issue is not about technical interpretations of rules – it’s about the education and training of 80,000 students and the future of San Francisco’s workforce.”
