Behavioral Sciences Department

Vision Statement

The Behavioral Sciences Department is dedicated to inspiring students to learn, and to succeed in their academic and life goals. Towards this vision, we strive to create classroom and departmental environments of mutual respect where we offer a range of quality, transferable courses to meet the needs of potential majors and non-majors alike.

In teaching courses in the disciplines of anthropology, psychology, and sociology, we strive to transmit our own enthusiasm for subjects that can help students to better understand themselves, appreciate human diversity, and ultimately find success in the complex and interconnected world we share.

As teaching faculty, we are dedicated to our own professional development and the pursuit of teaching excellence. And, as part of a rich and diverse collaborative environment, we strive to learn from and seek input from our students, colleagues, and communities so as to best respond to their changing needs and interests.
