General Questions

Q. How does CCSF define Modified Learning?

A. Modified Learning is defined as a class that is delivered remotely via Canvas, but was originally designed to be a face-to-face class.

Q. Will student workers, faculty and staff experience any interruption or loss of pay when they work remotely?

A. All employees, including student workers/lab aides, will be paid as usual without interruption.

Q. Why was Spring Break moved up a week?

A. Spring Break was moved up in order to minimize the interruption to student learning.

Q. If face-to-face classes are being offered in instructional locations outside of City College, will these classes continue with face-to-face instruction?

A. Face-to-face instruction will continue as long as the third-party location site remains open.

Q. When can I access CCSF buildings?

A. The period from March 13 through March 20 is being used to prepare for the resumption of instruction and student services on March 30th. While face-to-face instruction and student services are suspended at CCSF locations during this time, administrators, faculty, and classified staff will have limited access to campus buildings as a part of this preparation activity.

Friday, March 13, Monday March 16, and Tuesday March 17

Buildings will be open at the Ocean Campus and at the Centers from 8:00am to 5:00pm.

Wednesday, March 18 through Friday, March 20.

All Centers will be closed. Ocean Campus buildings will be open from 8:00am to 5:00pm. The purpose of having building access during this time is to prepare for the delivery of instruction and student services remotely starting on March 30th. All other on-campus activities (e.g., committee meetings) shall either be rescheduled or conducted remotely.

Details of campus building accessibility after March 20 will be published next week. All employees shall coordinate their work activities for this period with their supervisor. Faculty members should inform their Department Chairs.
