Chloe de los Reyes
Academic Representative

When Chloe de los Reyes received her Bachelor's degree in English Literature, she applied and was accepted to CSUSB's M.A. in English Composition program. The program and her work as a writing tutor and an international exchange tutor in Germany allowed her to talk about, as well as piece together, all of the things she was interested in about writing as well as her personal experiences as a multilingual. Her scholarly interests include writing center studies, collaboration, multilingual writing, and the intersections of language, identity, and culture. She has also done some work on adjunct advocacy and is committed to social justice. She has presented at both national and international conferences and has co-authored pieces on both multilingual tutoring and academic status and academic hierarchy. Her most recent work appeared in the Voices of Practice: Narratives in the Margins. She currently teaches at Crafton Hills College, where she is also the Multilingual Program Faculty Lead.
